SIMON ALLEN

SIMON

Thank you, Greg

Ladies and Gentlemen, fellow shareholders – Good afternoon. I'm Simon Allen Chairman of the New Zealand Refining Company Limited – and it gives me great pleasure to welcome you all to the 59th Annual Meeting of shareholders.

Normally we would meet you face-to-face, but these are not normal times for anyone. Even so, we've done all we can to enable shareholders to participate and thank you for taking the time to join this web cast today.

Please note that my address and the Annual Meeting presentation have been posted on the New Zealand Stock Exchange. Both will also be available on the Company's website later today.

AGENDA

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

We have the necessary quorum of shareholders and I therefore declare the meeting officially open.

Ahead of the formal business of the meeting Naomi and I will review the 2019 financial year and provide an update on the company's plans going forward.

You will notice that our focus this year is much more on the future than reviewing the year recently concluded. This is because we now find ourselves in a radically different environment, and one that is changing all the time. We are all in a new world, and I'm sure your focus, like ours, is on how we adapt and change as a company under these new conditions.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS

Let me now quickly review the 2019 year, and how quickly things have changed. I will also give you a Board perspective of our Strategic Review before our chief executive sets this out in more detail.

I'm not going to go into too much detail about last year. Our annual report and our recent presentation of our 2019 financial results are available to shareholders. And we are happy to take any questions on these when it comes to question time.

The key point I'd like to make is that last year's results confirm a trend and put into stark relief why we are undertaking our Strategic Review.

In 2019 we achieved a very good operating performance with 99.7 percent plant availability – up from 90.7% the previous year and reflecting this and plant optimisation. – Our employees and contractors helped to deliver an outstanding personal and process safety performance for the business with only one lost time injury during the year and no Tier 1 or Tier 2 process safety incidents. Our Safety Case was approved in January by the regulator, Worksafe.

And yet, this operational performance did not deliver commensurate financial results.

Net Profit after Tax (NPAT) was $4.2 million, compared to $30 million the year before. EBITDA was $118 million.

Our uplift over the Singapore Complex Margin significantly increased to USD 4.32 per barrel

To put that in context, the first ten months our GRM averaged USD5.85 per barrel, before margins fell to USD2.62 in the last two months of the year. This weakness continued into early 2020 and has been further compounded by the impact of COVID-19 on fuel demand.

Our 2019 result was in line with the profit matrix that we shared with shareholders at the 2019 Annual Shareholders Meeting. It is clear that in a lower margin environment, and with our current cost base and operating model, we do not earn our cost of capital, and in some cases, do not cover our costs.

A CHALLENGING START TO 2020

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

RNZ has responded quickly

ROBUST COVID-19 RESPONSE

Rapid response to COVID-19

Plan to operate cash-neutral

COVID has compounded structural pressure on global refining margins

REFINANCING

Increase in total available debt funding facilities to $400 million

No significant maturities until March 2022

Increases the average term of the bank facilities to over three years

DIVIDENDS

Fully imputed dividend 2.0 cents per share

No final dividend paid reflects challenging low margin environment

Before explaining the governance arrangements for the Strategic Review, I want to pause to thank all our team for their incredible response to COVID-19 to both safeguard the company in the short term, and to ensure New Zealand's fuel supply lines remain flexible and available in these extraordinary times.

Refining NZ responded very quickly to the reduction in fuel demand brought on by the COVID-19 travel and transport restrictions. In late March, the company moved to a robust operating model, agreed with customers, and this mode has been extended until August 2020. This enables us to plan to run cash-neutral through this time.

Given the challenging operating environment, and the uncertainty associated with COVID-19, we chose to increase and extend our bank facilities in March. This brings Refining NZ's total available debt funding facilities to $400 million with no significant maturities until March 2022.

We were very pleased with the support of our banks which reflects their confidence in our business. Taking these actions has meant that we are in as good a position as we can be to withstand an extended period of low demand.

In such uncertain times, the Directors have resolved that it is prudent to not pay a final dividend. Our interim dividend of two cents paid in September becomes our total dividend payment for the year.

RECENT BUSINESS CHANGES

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 23 APRIL 2020

BOARD & MANAGEMENT

Naomi James appointed CEO

Paul Zealand in Managing Director role to assist with CEO transition

Andrew Brewer appointed to new role of COO

EXTERNAL AUDIT CHANGE

Audit independence policy aligned to Financial Markets Authority guidance

Ernst & Young (EY) appointed after thorough market assessment

EY standing for reappointment today

EMISSIONS TRADING SCHEME

RNZ to enter the Emissions Trading Scheme when NGA expires

Allocation based on 2006-2009 emissions data

Further reforms may alter allocative baselines

I would now like to highlight three important areas of recent change for the business:

We've had some important team changes:

Naomi James was appointed Chief Executive Officer, effective April 2020. We are pleased to have someone with Naomi's extensive experience of change management, during what is a time of fundamental change for this business. We have put in place a long-term incentive package for Naomi that focusses on retention and aligns with shareholders' interests, as was recently announced.

Secondly, I would like to thank Paul Zealand on behalf of your Board for his service as Managing Director during our CEO transition. Paul's ability to step into an executive role was very much appreciated. Paul's ability to work with Naomi and the Board has enabled our new CEO to hit the ground running. So, thank you, Paul, and we're delighted you've been able to resume your role as independent director.

Thirdly, Andrew Brewer was appointed to the new role of Chief Operating Officer, effective March 2020. Andrew brings a wealth of experience in the refining sector, having spent the previous 18 years with Caltex in Australia and Chevron in Canada, in refinery and supply leadership roles.

In December, the Refining NZ Board aligned its audit policy and its external audit services with recent market guidance from the Financial Markets Authority (FMA). This led to our reissuing the Company's Auditor Independence policy statement and carrying out a market assessment of external audit services. As a result, the Board appointed Ernst & Young to provide external audit services to the Company, and reached a mutual agreement that PwC resign from their auditor role.

The Refining NZ Board acknowledges the quality and professionalism of the audit services provided by PwC over the last twenty years. EY is standing for reappointment by shareholders at this Meeting.

The final area of change relates to the Emissions Trade Scheme. The Government has approved bringing Refining NZ into the New Zealand Emissions Trading Scheme (NZETS) as an Emissions Intensive Trade Exposed business, as we had negotiated with the Government. We believe that this decision by policy makers is firm but fair, consistent with a just transition environment.

WHY? STRATEGIC REVIEW RATIONALE

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

Change is needed

- Return on capital is not acceptable
- Structural changes resulting in low refining margins globally due to oversupply
- Current business model and processing agreements largely unchanged since 1995
- Examine options to extract more value from infrastructure assets

10

So while 2019 had its highlights, overall it underscored the serious, underlying challenges facing the business. And then COVID-19 arrived reinforcing why we cannot go on as we have. We are tackling these challenges in our Strategic Review which is designed to set the company up for its next phase, leveraging its significant assets to maximise returns to shareholders through the cycle.

HOW? STRATEGIC REVIEW PROCESS

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

INDEPENDENT GOVERNANCE

- There will be competitive matters not appropriate to share with full Board
- Independent directors committee will oversee these issues
- Committee will separately oversee and take decisions on these matters

WORKSTREAMS + PHASES

- 3 workstreams: Business Model and Capital Structure
- Initial phase to assess options
- Support and expert advice from external advisors

CEO TO LEAD

- Naomi James, CEO will lead the process. The new CEO started in April, with the need for strategic change identified.
- International search for:
- Change management
 - Strategy development
 - Oil and gas experience
 - Transformation of commodity businesses

11

Critical to ensuring we get the best outcome for the company and for you, our shareholders, will be how your Board governs this important process.

Our independent directors will play a central role in representing the interests of our non-customer shareholders through the review. We will draw on the skills of all of our directors, but our independent directors committee will separately oversee and take decisions on matters relating to our customer-shareholders. You can have confidence that the outcomes from the Strategic Review will be in the interests of all shareholders.

We will obviously carefully consider the views and interests of all our stakeholders, while having a clear focus on our shareholders and delivering an outcome that ensures we have a sustainable and valuable long-term business.

Our Strategic Review will be led by CEO Naomi James, who is very well qualified for this role, supported by the management team as well as external advisers.

Following a rigorous, international search. Naomi joins the Company from Santos Limited, one of Australia's largest independent oil and gas producers, where she was responsible for midstream infrastructure assets including oil and gas processing facilities. At Santos Naomi led the creation of a separate business division for Santos' infrastructure assets with the aim of realising additional value from these assets.

We've put in place a long term remuneration package that incentivises Naomi, and we look forward to her leadership of the Strategic Review, and of the company as it transitions to its optimal structure and operating mode based on the best option arising from the review.

I would now like to invite your new CEO, Naomi James, to give you more detail on the Strategic Review.

CEO ADDRESS

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

CEO ADDRESS

NAOMI JAMES

Thank you, Simon. Let me start by adding my welcome to Simon's. Thank you for joining us today. While it's regrettable I can't be meeting you face-to-face, I hope we can do that in the not-too-distant future. Many of you I know have been part of the life of this company for a long time. Your perspectives are something I value, and your interests are at the heart of why I'm here and excited by this opportunity.

I was attracted to this role both by the quality of this company, and the scale of the challenge. While I didn't anticipate starting the role in this sort of operating environment, it hasn't changed my view on the opportunity to create shareholder value at RNZ with what we have.

STRATEGIC REVIEW: INTRODUCTION

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

- Aims:
 - Determine the optimal business model and capital structure for its assets
 - Maximise "through cycle" returns to shareholders
 - Deliver secure, competitive fuel for NZ, now and into a lower carbon future
 - Unlock value of infrastructure

So to start with, what are we seeking to achieve with the Strategic Review?

We are seeking two things from the process:

- To determine the optimal business model – which needs to be one that delivers acceptable returns through the cycle, and
- To determine the best capital structure for that business model – which maximises the value of those assets to our shareholders

We have a unique mix of skill, capabilities and expertise, as well as our physical assets. And our role at the very heart of New Zealand’s transport fuels supply chain is something we can leverage more effectively than we have been doing.

While I’m very focused in bringing a shareholder value lens to the process, I am also bringing an open mind to the options. What is up for review is the way the company operates and the ownership and capital structure of its assets. Through this initial stage of the process we will be engaging with a range of stakeholders to develop and assess those options.

RETURNS BELOW THE COST OF CAPITAL

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

Refinery has not earned its cost of capital through the cycle due to:

- Regional supply/demand imbalance
- Structure of the processing agreements (est.1995)
- Increased cost of operations (especially electricity and natural gas) and investments made

¹⁾ 2006 was the first year for full adoption of NZ IFRS, comparing returns on capital in earlier years would be misleading

Returns haven't been acceptable as shown on this slide.

Although we've invested significantly over the last decade, the returns on invested capital have only once in the last 10 years exceeded the cost of capital which was in a year of high margins.

Why are returns too low?

Firstly, substantial new supply from low cost producers in places like the Middle East, China, India, South Korea, is depressing global and regional margins.

These changes are taking place in the context of extraordinary volatility in the global oil market due to Covid-19 which have seen the biggest fall in oil prices since 1991 on the back of the collapse in demand for oil products globally. Notably, dated Brent crude, being one of the crudes we benchmark off, recently dropped to a 21 year low of around USD 13 per barrel.

While the logical response for the excess supply we are seeing in oil and refining capacity should be supply coming out of the market, we don't see this occurring. As global competition has expanded, we have moved from companies competing, to countries competing – in many cases these competitors are effectively national enterprises who don't operate under the same economic constraints that we do.

Secondly, Refining NZ has operated under the same processing agreements with its three customers since 1995. These 25 year old agreements are now outdated and do not reflect the current environment.

Thirdly, our own cost structure isn't helped by rising electricity and natural gas costs in New Zealand which means that the fee floor in our processing agreements no longer covers our cash costs.

So we face major structural challenges, both in terms of how we organise our business, as well as how the global market is changing.

But we have a lot to play with, and for. We have significant and strategic infrastructure assets with which to realise further value for shareholders. Our assets play a crucial role in the supply of transport fuel, with 70 percent of the nation's fuel processed through our assets.

Our assets are deeply integrated into the fuel supply chain, including –

- The Refinery to Auckland pipeline, or RAP, which connects with the Wiri terminal in Auckland and gives us a strong competitive advantage in that market. This is one of the most valuable and strategic assets in the New Zealand fuel supply chain.
- The land at Marsden Point is adjacent to Northport, which is strategically important for importing generally and is likely to grow in importance.

- And we have a high level of technical skills including the inherent flexibility to adapt or repurpose parts of the refinery, including opportunities to produce lower-carbon fuel.

REFINERY OPPORTUNITIES

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

Immediate opportunities

Examples of opportunities to support New Zealand's transition to a lower carbon economy

A key part of the strategic review is to look at whether we can make a fundamental change to the competitiveness of refining operations and the economics of our business model in order to improve the financial performance of the refinery.

We have achieved progress in several of these areas, but there is a clear potential to do more.

On the right side of the graphic we talk about the opportunities that exist for our refining assets and capabilities to make a very significant contribution to New Zealand's transition to a lower-carbon transport fuels environment.

OPPORTUNITY TO UNLOCK VALUE OF INFRASTRUCTURE

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

Refinery and Infrastructure assets are owned and operated by a single vehicle
Customer terms are primarily governed by the processing agreements

RNZ believes that the value of the Infrastructure assets is not appropriately reflected in its share price
The Strategic Review will seek to address this

17

Part of this assessment will include how we can unlock greater value from our infrastructure.

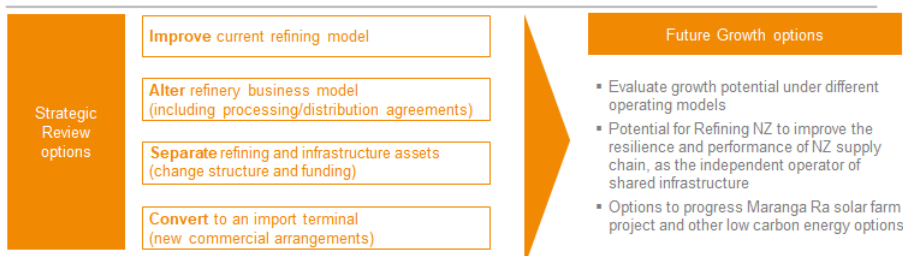

We know that today the combination of assets in a single corporate structure with volatile earnings from our refinery assets effectively mean that our infrastructure assets are under-valued.

An important part of the review will be to assess what is the right capital structure for the business going forward.

OPTIONS

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

- Options to optimise business model and capital structure to maximise value for shareholders
- Maximise "through cycle" returns to shareholders
- Deliver secure, competitive fuel supply to New Zealand

Here's a summary of options under consideration.

These are illustrative and not exhaustive. The answer may involve a combination of the options listed. But there is no status quo option – shareholder returns as things stand are not acceptable.

Starting with the top box on the left, we will look at all options to make significant improvements in the financial performance of the refinery within the current business model.

Secondly, we will look at options to change the business model for the refinery, whether that's the processing agreement or distribution arrangements.

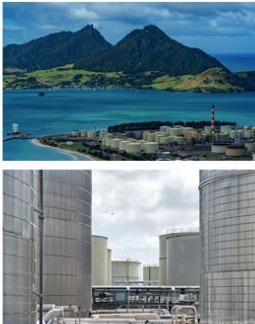

Thirdly, we will look at options to create separate capital structures for the refining and infrastructure assets.

Fourthly, we will look at the alternative business model of converting to import operations.

And we will look beyond our existing assets for opportunities to grow and diversify our asset portfolio, where Refining NZ could, as the independent operator of shared infrastructure, improve the resilience and performance of New Zealand's fuel supply chain.

NEXT STEPS

REFINING NZ
ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING | 29 APRIL 2020

Create value for shareholders and support secure, competitive fuel supply to New Zealand, now and into a lower carbon future

We are actively engaging with employees, customers, Government and other stakeholders

All options are on the table

Expect to update the market on the Strategic Review in June 2020

We expect to provide an update in June on the Strategic Review.

Over the next couple of months we will engage with all our stakeholders – particularly customers and Government – to make sure we can identify and assess the best options available.

Regardless of the outcome, we will remain a significant investor and player in New Zealand's transport fuel supply system.

Our assets offer enormous opportunity if we can structure them to make the most of the market conditions we see now and into the future. Again, our priority is to unlock the value that the market is not currently ascribing to our valuable and strategic infrastructure assets.

Thank you for your attention, and for the opportunity to lead this exciting work, and to help this iconic New Zealand enterprise take its next major step into the future.

Thank you, Simon, and I'll hand back to you to continue with the meeting agenda.
